

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

Louisville is Hosting the First Regional Heart and Stroke Conference of 2009

Louisville, KY – February 16, 2009 – Sullivan University College of Pharmacy— The American Heart Association, in collaboration with the Sullivan University College of Pharmacy, is sponsoring the First Regional Heart and Stroke Continuing Education Conference on March 13 and 14, to be held at the Seelbach Hilton Hotel.

All healthcare professionals are invited to attend, including physicians, pharmacists, nurses, nurse practitioners, surgeons, and cardiologists, to earn their 10 required continuing education units for the year. The program is composed of numerous podium presentations, and the audience will be able to engage in a variety of topics, focusing primarily on cardiovascular and neurological health concerns and breakthroughs.

The conference will provide a continental breakfast at 7 a.m. both days, and will offer lunch on Friday. An optional symposium dinner will be held Friday evening at the Oak Room, Kentucky's only AAA five diamond-rated restaurant. Saturday's events will end at noon.

“This year's conference is the first time that the program is expanded to become the regional conference to provide a venue for all healthcare professionals in the tri-state region,” stated Dr. Hieu Tran, Committee Chair and Dean of the Sullivan University College of Pharmacy. “We are excited to promote this cutting edge news in the area of patient care related to heart disease and stroke prevention.”

The program is available for viewing online at www.sullivan.edu/pharmacy for further details on speakers and topics. All questions regarding the program can be directed to The American Heart Association 502-587-8641.

Interested parties are asked to e-mail registration@heart.org to be included on the final invitation list. Registration fees are $95 for all licensed medical professionals and $25 for all undergraduate nursing and medical students. The symposium dinner, which has limited-seating, is available for $25.
